Shapiro for Governor: Gov.-Elect Josh Shapiro and Lt. Gov.-Elect Austin Davis announce transition leadership board, personnel committee.

Text of Nov. 22 press release.

Following the Thanksgiving holiday, the transition will announce key policy advisory committees to help the incoming administration prepare to advance the governor-elect's priorities.

HARRISBURG, PA – Today, Governor-Elect Josh Shapiro and Lieutenant Governor-Elect Austin Davis announced an initial round of transition leadership as they continue working to build an Administration that represents the entire Commonwealth and brings Pennsylvanians together.

Last week, Governor-Elect Shapiro and Lieutenant Governor-Elect Davis took the first steps in this transition — reiterating their focus on growing Pennsylvania's economy, ensuring our kids receive a quality education, and making our communities safer. During that announcement, the Transition rolled out a website which serves as the central location for people to apply for roles in the Shapiro-Davis Transition and Administration. Pennsylvanians of all backgrounds and political perspectives are encouraged to apply for roles in the Shapiro-Davis Transition and Administration by visiting www.shapirodavis.org.

Today, the Shapiro-Davis Transition is announcing a Leadership Board and Personnel Committee – key leadership groups who will advise the Governor-Elect during the transition. After Thanksgiving, the Transition will be announcing Advisory Committees of policy and professional experts, community advocates, and business, industry, and labor leaders to help the incoming Administration prepare to advance Governor-Elect Shapiro's top priorities: growing our economy, making our communities safer, and ensuring all Pennsylvania students receive a high-quality education.

The Transition Leadership Board is a diverse, dynamic, bipartisan group that will be chaired by William Sasso, the Chairman Emeritus of Stradley Ronon who has served in leadership roles under Governor Tom Wolf and Governor Tom Corbett.

The following individuals will serve on the Transition Leadership Board:

- Chairman of the Board William Sasso, Chairman Emeritus of Stradley Ronon
- Ryan Boyer, Business Manager of the Philadelphia Building and Construction Trades Council
- Gregory E. Deavens, President and CEO of Independence Health Group
